Dear Partners,

Back in 2014, we started asking a question that is based in the realities of Chicago’s profound segregation: What does it cost us to live so separately from each other by race and income? We partnered with the Urban Institute to answer the question, and by 2017 released our findings: Our segregation costs us $4.4 billion in additional income, 30 percent higher homicides and 83,000 less bachelors degrees.

Our second question points us to the future: What do we do about it? Together with more than 110 advisors and five working groups, we conducted focus groups, interviews, and learned from other regions. We focused on racism as the root cause of segregation, and the result was released in May of this year—Our Equitable Future: A Roadmap for the Chicago Region. Our recommendations fall in two categories: structural change through a racial equity framework, and more than two dozen policy changes that can be enacted over the next two years.

This report is our first update on that work. Six months after the release, we are working closely with a number of partners on implementation, excited about the progress so far and focused on the work ahead.

From our team, thank you for all that you've done to shape, lead and inspire the work of creating a more racially equitable Chicago region.

With gratitude,
Metropolitan Planning Council

Cost of Segregation & Our Equitable Future Team Members
1 equity roadmap for the region
27 policy and intervention recommendations

More than 20 implementation partners
2 simultaneous pathways toward equity

More than 110 expert advisors
5 policy area working groups
5 focus groups and 25 in-depth interviews across the city and the region

10 profiles of leaders, organizations, companies and individuals driving change
16 themed blog posts on MPC’s website

1 video featuring equity leaders
200 leaders surveyed across the region

10 public events calling attention to history & present-day role of the arts in addressing segregation and racism
50+ presentations across the U.S. and Europe

More than 240 traditional media placements
Potential viewership of more than 480 million U.S. residents

2 trending hashtags on social media platforms

#CostOfSegregation #OurEquitableFuture
Cook County’s newly released strategic plan takes several unprecedented steps: Acknowledging the role that government has played in creating and maintaining racial inequities, becoming a member of the Government Alliance on Race and Equity (GARE), mandating implicit bias and diversity and inclusion training for staff under the Office of the President, establishing an internal Racial Equity Leadership Council, and formally adopting a racial equity framework to guide its decision-making.

The Chicago Department of Public Health (CDPH) has signed on with GARE to deepen its commitment to equity. The department’s proposed 2019 budget includes a new position dedicated to advancing racial equity and workforce development through assessments, implementation of racial equity action plans, training, and public engagement. In addition, CDPH will continue work that aims to measure and identify strategies for public health to address structural racism. CDPH’s next Community Health Assessment, which MPC is a partner in conducting, will focus on measuring how well the city’s public health system is advancing health equity.

Ensuring equitable distribution of affordable housing: MPC worked with Alderman Ameya Pawar (47th) on the Affordable Housing Equity ordinance, which he introduced to the City Council with 27 sponsors in July 2018. That same month, the Shriver Center on Poverty Law and the Chicago Area Fair Housing Alliance (CAFHA) released A City Fragmented, a report that explicitly identified the current mechanics and quantified the impacts of aldermanic prerogative within a civil rights legal framework. And in November 2018, the Shriver Center filed a complaint against the city with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to stop the discriminatory effects of aldermanic prerogative used to block affordable housing in “predominately white, resource rich communities.”

Conducting a regional assessment of fair housing: 50 years after the Fair Housing Act, several parties across municipal lines are collaborating for a regional assessment of fair housing (AFH) for the first time. Partners include Cook County, the City of Chicago and their respective housing authorities, along with Enterprise Community Partners, CAFHA, MPC, and 15 additional jurisdictions. The goal of completing a regional AFH is now embedded in Cook County’s Policy Roadmap and the City of Chicago’s Resiliency Plan and 5 Year Housing Plan.

Expanding homeownership: Neighborhood Housing Services, The Resurrection Project and MPC gave recommendations to the Department of Planning and Development in Summer 2017 on establishing a revised version of the New Homes for Chicago program. The City Council passed the Building Neighborhoods and Affordable Homeownership ordinance on October 31, 2018, which establishes $5 million for affordable homes in communities of the South and West Sides, including Englewood, North Lawndale, South Lawndale, Humboldt Park, Garfield Park, and Woodlawn.

Providing property tax relief for affordable units across a range of neighborhoods: A statewide bill was introduced in April 2018 to create a new property tax incentive program to encourage investment and create and preserve affordable rental homes in both strong and weak markets. Property owners that commit to providing affordable rents for a minimum period of 10 years will receive the benefit of a reduction in the equalized assessed value of their property after new construction or eligible rehabilitation. The bill will be reintroduced in January 2019, during the start of the new session. The City of Chicago’s new 5 Year Housing Plan also endorses this strategy. This work is being led by Housing Action Illinois, Enterprise Community Partners, and CIC/Preservation Compact. In addition, Alderman Joe Moreno (1st) introduced a resolution in early November 2018 in support of the ordinance.

Building inclusive housing and neighborhoods

Dismantle the institutional barriers that create disparities and inequities by race and income

The Chicago Department of Public Health (CDPH) has signed on with GARE to deepen its commitment to equity. The department’s proposed 2019 budget includes a new position dedicated to advancing racial equity and workforce development through assessments, implementation of racial equity action plans, training, and public engagement. In addition, CDPH will continue work that aims to measure and identify strategies for public health to address structural racism. CDPH’s next Community Health Assessment, which MPC is a partner in conducting, will focus on measuring how well the city’s public health system is advancing health equity.

Conducting a regional assessment of fair housing: 50 years after the Fair Housing Act, several parties across municipal lines are collaborating for a regional assessment of fair housing (AFH) for the first time. Partners include Cook County, the City of Chicago and their respective housing authorities, along with Enterprise Community Partners, CAFHA, MPC, and 15 additional jurisdictions. The goal of completing a regional AFH is now embedded in Cook County’s Policy Roadmap and the City of Chicago’s Resiliency Plan and 5 Year Housing Plan.

Expanding homeownership: Neighborhood Housing Services, The Resurrection Project and MPC gave recommendations to the Department of Planning and Development in Summer 2017 on establishing a revised version of the New Homes for Chicago program. The City Council passed the Building Neighborhoods and Affordable Homeownership ordinance on October 31, 2018, which establishes $5 million for affordable homes in communities of the South and West Sides, including Englewood, North Lawndale, South Lawndale, Humboldt Park, Garfield Park, and Woodlawn.

Providing property tax relief for affordable units across a range of neighborhoods: A statewide bill was introduced in April 2018 to create a new property tax incentive program to encourage investment and create and preserve affordable rental homes in both strong and weak markets. Property owners that commit to providing affordable rents for a minimum period of 10 years will receive the benefit of a reduction in the equalized assessed value of their property after new construction or eligible rehabilitation. The bill will be reintroduced in January 2019, during the start of the new session. The City of Chicago’s new 5 Year Housing Plan also endorses this strategy. This work is being led by Housing Action Illinois, Enterprise Community Partners, and CIC/Preservation Compact. In addition, Alderman Joe Moreno (1st) introduced a resolution in early November 2018 in support of the ordinance.

Building inclusive housing and neighborhoods

Ensuring equitable distribution of affordable housing: MPC worked with Alderman Ameya Pawar (47th) on the Affordable Housing Equity ordinance, which he introduced to the City Council with 27 sponsors in July 2018. That same month, the Shriver Center on Poverty Law and the Chicago Area Fair Housing Alliance (CAFHA) released A City Fragmented, a report that explicitly identified the current mechanics and quantified the impacts of aldermanic prerogative within a civil rights legal framework. And in November 2018, the Shriver Center filed a complaint against the city with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to stop the discriminatory effects of aldermanic prerogative used to block affordable housing in “predominately white, resource rich communities.”

Conducting a regional assessment of fair housing: 50 years after the Fair Housing Act, several parties across municipal lines are collaborating for a regional assessment of fair housing (AFH) for the first time. Partners include Cook County, the City of Chicago and their respective housing authorities, along with Enterprise Community Partners, CAFHA, MPC, and 15 additional jurisdictions. The goal of completing a regional AFH is now embedded in Cook County’s Policy Roadmap and the City of Chicago’s Resiliency Plan and 5 Year Housing Plan.

Expanding homeownership: Neighborhood Housing Services, The Resurrection Project and MPC gave recommendations to the Department of Planning and Development in Summer 2017 on establishing a revised version of the New Homes for Chicago program. The City Council passed the Building Neighborhoods and Affordable Homeownership ordinance on October 31, 2018, which establishes $5 million for affordable homes in communities of the South and West Sides, including Englewood, North Lawndale, South Lawndale, Humboldt Park, Garfield Park, and Woodlawn.

Providing property tax relief for affordable units across a range of neighborhoods: A statewide bill was introduced in April 2018 to create a new property tax incentive program to encourage investment and create and preserve affordable rental homes in both strong and weak markets. Property owners that commit to providing affordable rents for a minimum period of 10 years will receive the benefit of a reduction in the equalized assessed value of their property after new construction or eligible rehabilitation. The bill will be reintroduced in January 2019, during the start of the new session. The City of Chicago’s new 5 Year Housing Plan also endorses this strategy. This work is being led by Housing Action Illinois, Enterprise Community Partners, and CIC/Preservation Compact. In addition, Alderman Joe Moreno (1st) introduced a resolution in early November 2018 in support of the ordinance.
Establishing a graduated real estate transfer tax: Legislation introducing a graduated real estate transfer tax was introduced in late October 2018 by Alderman Walter Burnett, Jr. (27th) together with the Chicago Coalition for the Homeless to raise funds to fight homelessness, and by Alderman Gilbert Villegas (36th) to cover the cost of replacing lead water service lines to residences and businesses. Center for Tax and Budget Accountability Director of Research Daniel Kay Hertz and MPC Vice President Marisa Novara wrote an op-ed, which was published by the Chicago Sun-Times, on the need for a graduated real estate transfer tax to address Chicago’s 120,000 affordable housing unit shortfall. Danielle Gallet, who manages MPC’s water supply program, testified at the City Council’s Finance Committee, stating the organization’s support of developing viable and equitable revenue streams (such as Alderman Villegas’ proposal) to help fund lead service line replacement.

Creating equity in education

Create strong schools across Chicago neighborhoods: After holding community meetings about racial equity to engage community members across the city, Chicago United for Equity recruited candidates for Local School Council races, finding that those who attended one campaign training session and received one-on-one advising from CUE won at a rate of 89 percent, compared to 64 percent for non-participants. These new LSC members are now focused on racial equity across nine neighborhoods.

Reforming the criminal justice system

Breaking the link between people with low incomes and incarceration, such as by eliminating cash bail: The Criminal and Traffic Assessment Act—House Bill 4594 of the 100th General Assembly—was signed into law in August 2018. It reduces the burden of court costs, fines, and fees on Illinoisans who can’t afford to pay them by providing a waiver or fees based on a sliding scale. Aditi Singh, Staff Attorney and Policy Analyst at the Chicago Appleseed Fund for Justice, is leading this work with the Coalition to End Money Bond.

Recommendations added since May 2018

Conducting a universal mobility study: MPC convened a steering committee which consists of paratransit users, transit providers, disability rights advocates and ADA experts. In partnership with the University of Chicago’s Harris School of Public Policy, MPC has been building a measure of supply and demand for transportation for residents with disabilities. The Harris School initiated analysis in October 2018 and will deliver a report to MPC by December 2018.

Ensuring affordable and equitable water rates: MPC, along with its partners Elevate Energy and the Illinois Indiana Sea Grant, are conducting first-of-its-kind research in Northeastern Illinois to identify the extent to which affordability in water rates is impacting community members, and what communities can do to support those who face challenges in affording drinking water.
THE POWER OF COLLABORATIONS

Creating and enacting the equity roadmap has benefited from more than 110 advisors and implementation partners from throughout the Chicago region.

In some cases, MPC is working in partnership with these groups, in others they are the leading force and we applaud and support their efforts.

Here’s a partial list:

- Center for Tax & Budget Accountability
- Chicago Appleseed Fund for Justice
- Chicago Area Fair Housing Alliance
- Chicago Coalition for the Homeless
- Chicago Department of Public Health
- Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning
- Chicago United for Equity
- Community Investment Corporation/Preservation Compact
- Coalition to End Money Bond
- Cook County Office of the President
- Elevate Energy
- Elevated Chicago, including its 17 member organizations
- Enterprise Community Partners
- Government Alliance on Race & Equity
- Heartland Alliance
- Housing Action Illinois
- Illinois Asset Building Group
- Illinois Indiana Sea Grant
- Institute for Housing Studies at DePaul University
- Metropolitan Mayors Caucus
- My Block, My Hood, My City
- Neighborhood Housing Services
- Resilient Families Task Force
- Sargent Shriver National Center on Poverty Law
- The Resurrection Project
- The University of Chicago Harris School of Public Policy

Elevated Chicago

Nearly 40 professionals—including policy experts, nonprofit leaders, artists and organizers—make up Elevated Chicago’s steering committee, working groups, and community tables. These diverse members, which includes MPC Director of Community Engagement Kendra Freeman, help bring every voice to the table in the group’s efforts to use transit-oriented development to connect Chicagoans and build racial equity.
Chicago Resilient Families Task Force

MPC is a member of the Chicago Resilient Families Task Force. The task force has been convened to develop recommendations for the institution of a citywide guaranteed income pilot. Alderman Pawar (inset) has driven this initiative, as well as being a key partner in MPC’s work to increase affordable housing in Chicago’s wards that lack it.

Racial Justice & Education in Chicago

Local School Council President Elisabeth Greer announced that the National Teachers Academy (NTA) community launched a lawsuit against Chicago Public Schools (CPS) to address racial discrimination. MPC Vice President Marisa Novara was elected to a committee of citywide experts led by CUE to conduct a Racial Equity Impact Assessment. The committee found that the proposed closure would have a disproportionately negative impact on black students. MPC has been an active partner in advocating against the closure as a result of this partnership with NTA and CUE.

A Victory for NTA

On December 3, 2018, a judge issued a preliminary injunction against the closure of NTA. Later that day, CPS announced it would not appeal the ruling. As a result, NTA will remain open as an elementary school. This is the first time in national history that a school closure was blocked by a civil rights claim. Congratulations to NTA students, parents, CUE and the Chicago Lawyer’s Committee for Civil Rights.
EVENTS

FOSTERING CONVERSATIONS ABOUT SEGREGATION & RACISM

Since May, MPC has hosted and partnered with other organizations on 10 public events that have amplified the equity roadmap and drawn more attention to the work we all can do to help create a more equitable and inclusive Chicago region. From our recent collaboration with Victory Gardens Theater centered on themes highlighted in Ike Holter’s new play Rightlynd to a film screening of ‘63 Boycott with Kartemquin Films in honor of the 55th anniversary of the historic student protest in Chicago, these events have exposed issues of equity and humanized people’s lived experiences.

MPC is eager to continue the new collaborations we’ve been able to forge during these last six months, especially in locations and formats that take us out of our office and downtown Chicago. Have an idea for an event? Email us at events@metroplanning.org.

Event highlights

More than 150 people joined MPC and our partners at the release event of the equity roadmap in Bronzeville on May 15, 2018, which featured Storycatchers Theater and Enrich Chicago.

MPC partnered with the Chicago Humanities Festival to present an event at the South Shore Cultural Center, featuring artist Tonika Lewis Johnson and urban designer Paola Aguirre.

In September 2018, MPC curated two film screenings and conversations about racism, segregation and issues of equity, featuring Scrappers Film Group’s latest film "The Area."

In November 2018, MPC’s Marisa Novara joined Eve L. Ewing at the University of Chicago for a conversation about how we can create a more racially just and inclusive Chicago.

Photographer and Englewood resident Tonika Lewis Johnson’s ongoing project connects Chicago residents who live at corresponding addresses on opposite sides of the city. Through these pairings based on the city’s grid system—and the conversations they spur—Johnson illuminates the impact of segregation and the racist policies from which it emerged.

Although Tonika Lewis Johnson had long been reflecting on Chicago’s segregation and its impact on people’s experiences, it wasn’t until she came across

TONIKA LEWIS JOHNSON

THE FOLDED MAP PROJECT

Bridging the divides that separate Chicago’s communities
IN FOCUS

MAPPING CHICAGO’S SEGREGATION

Chicago's culture is uniquely defined by its neighborhoods. The city's grid system has been used since its inception in order to segregate communities based on various types of marginalization, including race, ethnicity, religion, and socioeconomic status.

The Folded Map project brings Chicago residents from opposite sides of the city together. These "map twins" include Englewood resident Nanette Tucker and Edgewater resident Wade Wilson, pictured standing on each other's porches (at right) and sitting together (below).

These images were featured in an exhibition at the Loyola University Museum of Art (LUMA), which ran from July to October 2018. MPC collaborated with LUMA on the development of collateral and programming for the exhibition.

© Tonika Lewis Johnson

MPC's 2017 Cost of Segregation report that her idea to document these disparities had more clarity.

"I used the report as a guiding tool," she says.

A Chicago native, Johnson has had first-hand experience with the city's inequities. She attended Lane Technical College Prep, a selective enrollment high school located in Roscoe Village. Her daily commute from Englewood to the city’s North Side during high school laid the foundation for the Folded Map project.

"We all know that segregation and inequity is wrong, and we know that our city has a deep history of it," Johnson says. "But MPC's report has helped us envision how we all can benefit socially and financially from a more equitable Chicago."

Johnson's work has provided one way for people to think critically about these issues. And her partnership with MPC has been an eye-opening experience for both parties. Through it, MPC learned how art can help in navigating discussions about some of our city's toughest issues, and creating spaces to work through racial discomfort and mistrust.

The widespread media coverage and public response the project has received clearly shows that Chicagoans are ready and eager to talk about these complicated issues. For Johnson, it's just the beginning.

"I'll continue pushing this conversation forward," she says.
ADVANCING EQUITY GOALS IN THE NEWS

One of MPC’s 2018 goals was to raise awareness of potential solutions to the pressing issues facing the Chicago region and those across the nation. This year, nearly 250 stories about the Our Equitable Future roadmap and its emphasis on racial equity have been published in media outlets across the U.S., potentially reaching more than 480 million people.

Here’s some of the coverage that the recommendations have received to date:

CHICAGO READER

Chicago’s civic and business elite put on epic display of wokeness, roll out racial equity plan
By Maya Dukmasova
May 15, 2018

CITYLAB

How Chicago’s aldermen help keep it segregated
By Tanvi Misra
August 2, 2018

CHICAGO SUN-TIMES

New city housing plan aims to build houses on vacant lots
By Adam Thorp
June 25, 2018

CURBED

Why U.S. cities need more multi-racial, mixed-income neighborhoods
By Alissa Walker
August 21, 2018

ttw11

Chicago’s minimum wage is rising, but is it enough to live on?
By Brandis Friedman
July 3, 2018

The New York Times

Can you win an election by talking about segregation? The next mayor of Chicago should find out.
By Natalie Y. Moore
September 9, 2018
CONTINUING THE MOMENTUM

We commit to continue tracking progress on all 27 of the recommendations outlined in Our Equitable Future, as well as those we add along the way, and holding ourselves, partners and government accountable for action. In addition, we and our partners will prioritize advancing key elements of our equity agenda in early 2019, including:

Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Strategic Framework: MPC will work with Elevated Chicago partners to develop a diversity, equity and inclusion framework geared towards leaders and institutions in the built environment. This includes the development of a multi-unit curriculum and training program to instill best practices that promote diversity, equity, and inclusion both internally and externally. A pilot is anticipated in early 2019.

Race and Equity Curriculum: MPC is developing curriculum for 9th- and 10th-grade students across Chicago. These resources can be used to engage youth around social justice issues in the Chicago region, and learn how systems of racism and oppression have contributed to issues of racial and economic segregation. This tool will create a platform for discussion and will highlight student voices in identifying ways to address key social justice issues around education, affordable housing, transportation access, economic justice, and criminal justice. We’re currently exploring potential partnerships for this project, as well as the possibility of including a unit on Tonika Lewis Johnson’s Folded Map project.

Vote Equity 2019: MPC will continue to work in coalition with five citywide organizations to ensure that racial equity is a key issue in the upcoming 2019 municipal elections. MPC brings key research and communications capacity to this collective action initiative led by organizers and researchers. Ultimately, this project will support Chicagoans in being informed and engaged voters, guided by a clearly defined vision for racial equity through a nonpartisan voter guide.

Community Impact Assessment Toolkit: In partnership with the Institute for Housing Studies at DePaul University, MPC is working with community partners to create a comprehensive toolkit that will help elevate community voice and spur productive dialogue to create more equitable development outcomes. It will consist of four key components: a neighborhood-specific data fact sheet, a detailed neighborhood risk index, an assessment questionnaire, and customized set of policy recommendations. These various resources will help inform community stakeholders of their current conditions and proactively guide them through the process of thinking through how a new or proposed development or community investment might best be leveraged in order to support community goals. We plan to launch a pilot of the tool in early 2019.
MOBILIZING FUNDERS IN ADVANCING EQUITY

MPC couldn’t do any of its work without the generous support of the foundations and individuals funding these crucial equity initiatives. We are grateful to The Chicago Community Trust and the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation for funding this research from inception to implementation. We are honored to have received additional support from The Annie E. Casey Foundation, Bowman C. Lingle Trust, CIBC, Conant Family Foundation, Enterprise Community Partners, Ford Foundation, JPMorgan Chase, Robert R. McCormick Foundation, Polk Bros. Foundation, and U.S. Bank. And we look forward to the work we’ll all do together in the months and years ahead to help the Chicago region move forward along its path to equity.

FUNDER SPOTLIGHT: THE CHICAGO COMMUNITY TRUST

The Chicago Community Trust is a community foundation dedicated to improving the Chicago region through strategic grant making, civic engagement and inspiring philanthropy.

Along with the MacArthur Foundation, The Trust has offered MPC continued, long-term support in exploring the cost of racism and segregation. Its generous contribution has played a vital role in MPC’s groundbreaking research.

MPC is grateful for the Trust’s investment in this area of work and looks forward to continuing to partner with the foundation on creating a more equitable and inclusive region.

To learn more about The Chicago Community Trust, visit cct.org.

“One of the biggest things holding Chicago back from being all that it can be is the inexcusable inequity that continues to exist. This equity roadmap has created a real opportunity for us to work together and heal some of the divides in our communities.”

DR. HELENE GAYLE
PRESIDENT & CEO
THE CHICAGO COMMUNITY TRUST
CONNECT WITH MPC

About Metropolitan Planning Council: Since 1934, MPC has been dedicated to shaping a more equitable, sustainable and prosperous greater Chicago region. We care about the entire Chicago region—from its people and businesses, to its neighborhoods and transportation networks, to its lakes, rivers and parks. That’s why we partner with businesses, communities and governments to address our most pressing challenges.

For more information about our equity roadmap and how you can get involved, visit:

metroplanning.org/roadmap

To stay updated on the progress and news related to recommendations from the roadmap, visit:

metroplanning.org/equityupdates

For more information about initiatives related to this work, please contact:

Marisa Novara
Vice President
Metropolitan Planning Council
312.863.6044
mnovara@metroplanning.org

Interested in supporting our work?

MPC views racial equity as an important tool on the path to eliminating some of the greatest impediments to individual, neighborhood, municipal, and regional prosperity. With more funding, we can achieve so much more.

In the year ahead, MPC will focus on implementing our equity roadmap with a robust policy agenda and diverse set of partners. Our collective efforts will help move the Chicago region in a more equitable direction. To do this, we need your support.

For more information about funding our work, please contact:

Janet Myers
Vice President of Philanthropy
Metropolitan Planning Council
312.863.6010
jmyers@metroplanning.org